People texting and driving is a problem our society is facing today. My art piece is a twist on the original "March on Washington" where they were protesting the lack of civil rights; instead today we are protesting the problem of texting and driving. Notre Dame Academy addressed this problem by taking pledges to not text while driving. By taking this pledge, our school won the Direction Credit Union Contest which the winnings went towards prom. In the piece, I put Notre Dame Academy students in to show how our school has helped solve the problem. I also put pledges in the background to show that all people have to do is sign the pledge and promise not to text and drive to save their life as well as others.
